Watch Out For...

Another tapas restaurant is coming to town, this one headed by English chef Jason Atherton—whom our travel columnist Hana covered a few pages back. (He's also launching a restaurant in Singapore. Busy man!) Quick rundown on Mr. Atherton: he's worked at Gordon Ramsay's Michelin-starred restaurant, Maze, at the Marriott Hotel Grosvenor Square, and opened his own Michelin-starred restaurant Pollen Street Social—both in London—before expanding his brand to Asia, where he's now popping out gastronomic ventures at record rates. The one in Hong Kong is called 22 Ships (22 Ship St., Wan Chai), after its location in the Star Street Precinct, and it will be a tapas bar. Stay tuned for details.

New restaurant add@prince

(3/F, Marco Polo Prince Hotel, Harbour City, 3-27 Canton Rd., Tsim Sha Tsui, 2113-6046) might sound more like a Twitter handle than a proper eatery, but this venue at the Prince Hotel will be serving up buffets with an Asian slant, including Canto and Japanese dishes. I haven't been yet, but from the pictures it looks like a typical buffet joint, with long counters full of spreads and rows and rows of tables.

Talk of the Town

The Hong Kong Tourism Board's upcoming Wine and Dine Month will be filled with events and activities, one of them being the Festival of Restaurants (www.festivalofrestaurants.hk), a month-long fiesta of prix fixe restaurant promos. More than 50 restaurants across the city will be participating—you can see the full list on their website—from western venues such as Peri, Aya and Zummer to Asian
